“QUWF, The Voice of Wildlife”

About QUWF

QUWF is the only Veteran founded, National 501C3 Wildlife Conservation Organization in the U.S., managed by a Disabled American Veteran. QUWF was formed to provide strong, local support of wildlife habitat restoration with local fundraising, local control of the majority of dollars raised, with local bank accounts under chapter control.

QUWF is the only wildlife habitat organization, by design, who works with all upland wildlife, any and all species that interest our local chapter's efforts.

QUWF is the founder and biological manager of the QUWF Missouri Grouse Co-op. Some 100,000 acres owned by 90 land owners dedicated to the restoration of the native wild ruff grouse. The coop is the largest for any specie in the mid-west.

Their distinctive logo represents the significant efforts in Timber Stand Improvement needed to restore and protect the ruff grouse. Hundreds of thousands of board feet of lumber is being removed to regenerate forests not only for the ruff grouse but for deer, turkey, quail and much more.

Our chapters and members provide the true, grassroots engine for local wildlife habitat work, youth outreach and training that makes a huge difference each and every day.

A New Emphasis for our Youth and Habitat Leaders

As the new generation of QUWF “Wildlife Habitat Warriors”© takes to the field, mountain and waters, QUWF developed a new logo for these elite leaders. When you see this logo, there is a leader for conservation among you. Today they are helping QUWF manage millions of acres nation-wide. Projects active today range from restoration of the wild ruff grouse, restoring upland wildlife in the east, south, midwest to managing water guzzlers in the high deserts of the west, or managing hundreds of acres for elk, mule deer, pheasant and chukar in the northwest.
